

Vancouver, B.C.

Summer 2007, the client approach The COLBORNE ARCHITECTURAL GROUP Pacific for a conceptual design of a café and juice bar. Gene Café is located at the gateway to the sprawling neighbourhood of the Mount Pleasant district in an existing commercial space within a prominent heritage building at 2404 Main Street. The design of this unique hospitality venue was addressed with minimalist millwork details that ensured the final layout met the functional requirements of the program. The establishment boasts a refined décor, windows for excellent viewing opportunities, a central location, and a triangular shaped floor plan that accommodates up to 30 people. Construction completed 2008.
